Weekly Pork Market Report

Week of 7.27.20

Pork output continues to run well above over year ago levels, with last week being up 11.8% from the same week a year prior. Larger production schedules are weighing heavy on many wholesale pork markets, but some firmness across the hams and loins was noted last week. Still, despite jumping more than 10% week-to-week, the ham primal value remains well below a year ago. Belly prices are holding mostly in the upper $0.90s, as has been the case since early June. The longer-term trend however for bellies in the late summer is lower.
